

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ONLINE SHOPPING SITE Offers “green” Showerhead with a pleasing spray that’s actually enjoyable

ShowerStore.com offers the Tempest by Interbath, which not only saves water, but may also use less energy as compared with other “water savers”

August 27, 2007

BALDWIN PARK, CA – When a shower spray leaves the showerhead, heat is dissipated into the surrounding air. Some low-flow showerheads that offer a “high-pressure” spray often use smaller droplets to give people the impression that there is more water. A smaller droplet loses heat faster than a larger one. That causes many people to crank up their shower’s temperature control valve to compensate for the loss of heat, which leads to an increase in energy consumption.

With Interbath’s randomized spray former, the Tempest is able to keep a larger drop size so the water maintains heat longer, which means there’s more heat reaching the bather. The spray pattern is tubular and envelops the body for a pleasing effect. Not only does this low-flow shower* help to save water, but it may also help save energy since less water is being heated.

ShowerStore.com currently offers The Tempest by Interbath fixed showerhead for $5.95 in Chrome and $4.95 in White.

* Flow rate is 2.0 GPM at 60 PSI
